These are a few of my favorite things ...

I don't pimp other people's parenting-related blogs and books very much on The Poop, for a couple of reasons: 1. I don't want to alienate friends and loyal readers who aren't included; and 2. I'm pretty sure our fans won't stick around if we just blog about other blogs.

That being said, I just have too much love in my heart right now for some local blogs and parenting lit, and I have to let it out ...

I received a galley of Rachel Sarah's book "Single Mom Seeking: Playdates, Blind Dates and Other Dispatches From the Dating World" last year when I MCed a mommy-related Litquake event, and thought it was a really fun read -- even though I'm a married dad not seeking. The book is available to the public now, and she's doing a reading at 7:30 p.m. this Tuesday (Jan. 30) at Modern Times Bookstore in San Francisco's Mission District. She also reads at 7 p.m. on Feb. 8 at Barnes & Noble in Emeryville.

Despite the fact that they were both started by guys, I'm comfortable enough with my sexuality to call journalist Paul Nyhan's Working Dad online diary at the Seattle Post-Intelligencer our sister blog. Paul started his parenting blog a few months before The Poop launched last July -- and he covers a lot of things we miss. Plus he's really cool about linking our blog.

I don't read many other blogs, but always try to check out local bloggers who contribute in our comments section. Fitnessfixation.com makes me laugh and just came off its strongest week so it's a great time to check the blog out, and Polly Pagenhart -- who I also met at the Litquake event -- is very entertaining and insightful on Lesbiandad.net.

A few others that I check out during my 12 seconds of free time each day ... Crazedparent.org, Citymama, MikeAdamick.com, Shaken Mama and Rebeldad.

If we ever get our s--- together, all of these and more will be added to our horribly outdated Blogroll. (La Leche?!? Who put that there?)

Comments

I assume you're read or at least heard of Mr. Nice Guy: <http://bonnehomme.blogspot.com/>?
He's hilarious!

I like Pierre Kim's MetroDad blog.
www.metrodad.typepad.com
Funny, acerbic, cute pix of his Peanut. Heartwarming - he has a great letter to The Peanut on her 2nd birthday (October 2006).
He's been busy since the holidays, but when he posts, it's great!
